Peer Reviewing

All articles submitted for publication in the Algerian Journal of Research and Studies undergo an initial review by the editorial board to assess their adherence to publication guidelines, including conformity to the journals' template. If the submission passes this stage, it is then assigned to at least two external experts, not affiliated with the authors' institution, ensuring impartial evaluation according to internationally recognized scientific and methodological standards. Articles may receive one of the following decisions: acceptance, acceptance with minor revisions, acceptance with major revisions, or rejection.

Publication Conditions

The editorial board is pleased to receive scientific articles specialized in various humanities and social sciences disciplines, in Arabic, English, or French. These articles are subject to the standards and conditions of peer review in academic scientific research, by specialists, and they comply with the standards of peer-reviewed scientific journals. The submitted texts must meet the following conditions:

1. The journal publishes original scientific research within the field of humanities (spanning areas such as communication and media sciences, history, library science, archaeology, philosophy, religious studies, physical education and various languages such as English, French and Arabic, etc.) and social sciences (including psychology, sociology, anthropology, etc.), in one of the three languages: Arabic, English, or French.
2. Submissions must be original and unpublished, adhering to the criteria and standards of scientific research. The author pledges this in writing.
3. Once a research paper or any part of it has been approved for publication in the Algerian Journal of Research and Studies, it may not be published elsewhere without obtaining written permission from the publishing director.
4. The author's consent to transfer all copyrights to the journal is required. Should the journal wish to republish the research, it must seek written approval from the author.
5. Authors must acknowledge the sources of their research.
6. Scientific articles that meet the requirements are assigned to at least two external reviewers who are not affiliated with the author's institution. Thus, the editorial board makes the final decision on whether to accept or reject the article based on their evaluations.
7. The journal publishes concise summaries (up to 3000 words) of PhD and Master's theses in the humanities and social sciences, provided that the research has not been previously published in books or other scientific journals.

8. The journal publishes detailed reports on national and international scientific conferences in the fields of humanities and social sciences, up to a limit of 4000 words.
9. The journal publishes scholarly critical reviews of books or works in the fields of humanities and social sciences that have been recently published or are about to be published, showcasing an appropriate scholarly perspective and a refined academic style.

Requirements of Manuscript Publication

1. The manuscript must not exceed 25 pages as a maximum limit or be less than 12 pages as a minimum, approximately between 6500 to 7500 words on A4 paper. For the main text in Arabic, use size 15 Traditional Arabic font, and size 12 for footnotes, with a 1.5 line spacing. For studies in foreign languages, Times New Roman font size 12 should be used for the main text, with footnotes in size 11. The journal reserves the right to summarize or abbreviate texts that exceed the specified limit.
2. Each article must be accompanied by abstracts in both Arabic and French, along with an English abstract and an additional abstract in a language different from that of the article's text for articles in English (either Arabic or French), each ranging from 150 to 200 words. Articles will not be published without abstracts and keywords.
3. Authors are requested to submit a brief biography along with a recent digital photograph.
4. The journal is not obligated to return manuscripts to their authors, whether they are published or not. However, it commits to informing authors about the acceptance of their submissions for publication and to providing reasons for any rejections via the scientific journals' electronic portal.
5. The journal reserves the right to publish manuscripts according to its editorial plan and at a timing it deems appropriate.

6. The journal does not adhere to any specific ideological direction and is not subject to constraints other than those of science and its ethical standards. Therefore, the texts published in the journal reflect the views of their authors and do not necessarily represent the opinion of the journal.
7. Graphs and illustrative figures should be included within the text, with their titles and explanatory notes provided below them.
8. Footnotes should be placed at the end of the article and numbered within the text.
9. In-text citations should be formatted as follows: (Author, Year: Page). Subsequently, a list of sources and references, organized alphabetically by the author's last name and in accordance with the APA (American Psychological Association) style, should be provided at the end of the paper.
10. The journal is published quarterly, with issues released in January, April, July, and October.
11. Special issues of the journal may be published during the academic year if necessary.
12. Research papers or studies should be submitted via the journal's email or through its online portal.

Editorial

It is with great pleasure that we present the second issue of the eighth volume of the Algerian Journal of Research and Studies. This edition stands as a testament to the vibrant and multifaceted nature of contemporary academic inquiry, offering our readership a rich mosaic of scholarship that spans the humanities and social sciences. The ten articles curated for this issue, while diverse in their subject matter and methodological approaches, are united by a shared commitment to a rigorous examination of the forces that shape our world—from the intimate contours of individual identity to the sprawling architecture of our social, political, and economic institutions.

This issue opens at the very heart of communication, with a fascinating linguistic and semiotic analysis of the animal world's place in Algerian idioms. This study reveals how collective memory and cultural attitudes are crystallized in language, providing a foundation for understanding the deeper structures of thought. From this collective level, we move to the individual through a masterful application of Bourdieusian theory to deconstruct the social and political forces that shaped one of Algeria's preeminent intellectuals, reminding us that even the most singular of minds is a product of its historical and cultural milieu.

This dialogue is extended across geographical and historical bounds in a powerful examination of African American identity, tracing its evolution through poetry as a vital archive of resistance and resilience. The critical importance of navigating such diverse cultural narratives is brought into sharp focus by a pedagogical study in Algeria and Turkey that provides a practical model for fostering empathy through the use of "Story Circles." Shifting from communication as a bridge to its potential as a weapon, the theme concludes with a critical analysis of hate speech in the media, scrutinizing its role in shaping public discourse and the urgent need for ethical journalistic frameworks.

The second major thematic current of this issue investigates the dynamics of our social and institutional frameworks. It begins with a meticulous sociological and statistical analysis of crime rates in Algiers, offering a data-driven look into the complex social and economic factors underpinning urban crime. This work serves as a crucial resource for policymakers and sociologists seeking to understand and address pressing societal challenges.

This focus on Algerian institutions is then explored through a trio of in-depth case studies: one examines the strategic adaptation of human resource management in a major industrial foundation; another delves into the crucial topic of social responsibility and ethics for the modern Algerian entrepreneur; and the third employs sophisticated factor analysis to dissect the motivational structures within the public hospital system. Finally, the institutional lens widens to the regional level with an investigation into how Saudi universities are strategically mobilized to cultivate a culture of volunteerism, offering valuable insights into the relationship between education, national policy, and social engineering.

Together, these ten articles paint a detailed and thought-provoking picture of our contemporary world. They traverse disciplines and continents, yet they consistently return to fundamental questions: How do we construct meaning? How do our institutions function, and how can they be improved? What are our ethical obligations to one another in an increasingly complex society?

We are confident that this collection will stimulate robust intellectual conversation and inspire further research. We extend our sincere gratitude to the authors for entrusting us with their work, to our dedicated peer reviewers for their invaluable contributions, and to our readers for their continued engagement. We invite you to delve into the rich intellectual offerings of this issue.
