ETHICS OF PUBLICATION

The Journal of Languages & Translation publishes original and blind peer-reviewed research papers relevant to languages and translation.

Our ethics publication is mainly based on the Code of Conduct and Best-Practice Guidelines for Journal Editors (Committee on Publication Ethics, 2011).

There should be an agreement upon standards of expected ethical behavior between all the parts involved in the publishing and editing act, namely editors in chief, associate editors, reviewers, and authors.

As member and effective parts of editorial board of the Journal of Languages & Translation, we are to be fully committed to good publication practice and accept the responsibility for fulfilling the following duties and responsibilities.

1) DUTIES OF THE EDITOR

- The Editor-in-Chief of the journal is responsible for deciding which of the articles submitted to the journal should be published. The editor may be guided by the editorial policies of the journal and constrained by such legal requirements as shall then be in force regarding libel, copyright infringement, and plagiarism. The editor may confer with associate editors or reviewers in making this decision.
- The Editor-in-Chief ensures that each manuscript received is evaluated on its intellectual content.
- The Editor-in-Chief, the members of the Editorial Board, and any editorial staff must not disclose any information about a submitted manuscript to anyone other than the authors of the manuscript, reviewers, other editorial advisers, and the publisher, as appropriate.
- Unpublished materials disclosed in a submitted manuscript will not be used in the own research of the Editor-in-Chief or the members of the Editorial Board without the express written consent of the author.

2) DUTIES OF REVIEWERS

- Peer review assists Editor-in-Chief and the Editorial Board in making editorial decisions and through the editorial communications with the author may also assist the author in improving the paper.
- A selected referee who feels unqualified to review the research reported in a manuscript or knows that its prompt review will be impossible should notify the editor and decline to review the paper.
- The manuscripts received for review will be treated as confidential documents. They will not be shown to or discussed with others except as authorized by the editor.
- Reviews should be conducted objectively. Personal criticism of the author is unacceptable.
- A reviewer should call to the editor's attention any substantial similarity or overlap between the manuscript under consideration and any other published paper of which they have personal knowledge.

- Reviewers should not consider manuscripts in which they have conflicts of interest.

3) DUTIES OF AUTHORS

- Authors should accurately present their original research, as well as objectively discuss its significance. Manuscripts are to be edited in accordance to the submission guidelines of the review.
- Authors should ensure that they have written entirely original works, and if the authors have used the work and/or words of others that this has been appropriately cited or quoted.
- Journal of Languages & Translation makes use of Detectia – an electronic similarity detection software tool that is used by ASJP(Algerian Scientific Journals Platform) to support editorial team in detecting potential plagiarism.
- An author should not in general publish manuscripts describing essentially the same research in more than one journal or conference. Submitting the same manuscript to more than one journal constitutes unethical publishing behavior and is unacceptable.
- All authors should disclose in their manuscript any conflict of interest that might be construed to influence the results or interpretation of their manuscript.
- Proper acknowledgment of the work of others must always be given. Any work or words of other authors, contributors, or sources should be appropriately credited and referenced.

Preface

Written by Said M Shiyab
Kent State University, USA

The evolving landscape of education in Algeria has become a rich ground for academic exploration, particularly in the domains of English as a Foreign Language (EFL) teaching, intercultural competence, and translation studies. This volume (Volume 5 issue 1 of the Journal of Languages & Translation) delves into contemporary educational challenges and methodologies within the unique Algerian socio-cultural and linguistic context. Through the adoption of an interdisciplinary approach, this volume brings together diverse perspectives and research on pivotal issues such as teacher stress, pedagogical innovation, technological integration, and linguistic influence.

One key focus is the relationship between the age of newly recruited EFL primary school teachers and their stress levels in classroom management. Drawing on experiences from Algeria and beyond, this volume investigates how age impacts coping mechanisms and stress management when teaching young learners. Effective classroom management is critical to successful teaching, and scholars in this volume provide valuable insights into how demographic factors like age influence teacher preparation, recruitment, and support strategies (Kyriacou, 2001). It is through the analysis of these qualitative and quantitative data, this volume sheds light on the professional challenges faced by novice teachers.

In the realm of pedagogical innovation, the integration of Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) into Algerian tertiary education is explored. This dual-focused approach enhances both teaching methodologies and translation practices, emphasizing the simultaneous acquisition of subject content and language skills. Such a strategy addresses the linguistic and cognitive needs of Algerian learners, fostering interdisciplinary learning and improving both language proficiency and translation competencies (Coyle et al., 2010).

The teaching of children's literature in higher education also presents unique opportunities and challenges. Researchers in this volume arguably examine transformative pedagogical practices that position children's literature as a medium for critical engagement, creativity, and social awareness. These integrative strategies inspire students to appreciate the artistic and didactic value of literary works, enriching their educational experience.

The COVID-19 pandemic has ushered in a global shift toward online learning, presenting new dynamics for English for Specific Purposes (ESP) education in Algeria. Researchers through volume investigate how post-pandemic ESP learning environments can foster learner autonomy, intercultural competence, and critical thinking. By leveraging digital tools and platforms, educators can transcend traditional classroom boundaries, equipping students with the skills needed to navigate an interconnected world (Holec, 1981).

The theme of identity, transformation, and cultural interconnectedness is also examined in this volume. Through the concept of "inadequacy to becoming," scholars highlight how pedagogical strategies can foster critical thinking and cultural sensitivity among Algerian EFL students. Literature in this volume is presented as a powerful medium for addressing socio-cultural issues and engaging students with diverse narratives and perspectives (Aboulela, 2015).

Storytelling is highlighted as a pedagogical strategy with immense potential for fostering intercultural sensitivity among EFL learners. Research in this volume examines how storytelling circles encourage empathy, global awareness, and linguistic competence, enabling learners to explore diverse worldviews and enhance their communicative abilities (Isbell et al., 2004).

Generative artificial intelligence (AI) in EFL education is another focal point. This volume explores with details the transformative impact of AI tools on educational landscapes, investigating their familiarity, use, and reception among Algerian EFL students. The findings emphasize the importance of integrating AI literacy into curricula to enhance language learning, creativity, and problem-solving skills while addressing ethical considerations (Zawacki-Richter et al., 2019).

The linguistic influence of Arabic on English written productions by Algerian novice learners is another area of investigation. This research uncovers the complexities of cross-linguistic interaction, including challenges posed by negative transfer. A notable case study examines a lexical-etymological analysis of "Sarah's laughter" in the Qur'an and the Bible, highlighting the interplay between obsolete words and lexical ignorance while providing insights into cultural and theological dimensions of language (Odlin, 1989).

Parental language attitudes and their impact on children's proficiency in Standard Arabic are also explored. In the context of Algeria's diglossic and linguistically diverse society, researchers underscore the pivotal role of familial influence in language acquisition. They advocate for greater parental engagement and awareness to foster linguistic development (Fishman, 1972).

All in all, this collection endeavors to provide a holistic contribution to the fields of EFL teaching, translation studies, and intercultural competence and that is by intertwining theoretical frameworks with practical applications; each study exemplifies the dynamic interplay between academic rigor and educational practice, offering innovative solutions to pressing challenges in the Algerian educational context. Through these discussions, this volume not only underscores the transformative power of education in shaping individuals and communities but also inspires stakeholders to reimagine teaching and learning paradigms that promote lifelong learning, cross-cultural understanding, and social progress.
